Chick-fil-A and a fan have found a wonderful way to bring new joy to Easter this year. Eric Moss, a pastor at Chick-fil-A in Worcester, Massachusetts, explained that the Chick-fil-A team was looking for a way to promote the Easter season and the new Spring menu of the restaurant. The team was wondering if anyone would like to wear a hat that depicted eggs decorated with the Chick-fil-A logo. "People could wear it to work or school and take their family photos with it," Moss said. "One family wore it to school and their kids made cards for other families in their class." Moss went to a local comic book store and gave the owner a "pennant sign" and asked him to duplicate it in dry-erase marker. "I didn't know he'd go crazy making it," Moss said, "and have a huge Easter display." The Easter display included 35 egg-shaped Easter hats hanging in the windows, a Spring Menu board and a huge sign that read "Spring is in the Air" and displayed the menu items. The Easter display also included printed signs with messages like "Spring Cleaning," "Spring Back to School" and "Happy Easter". "A lot of people came by and said, 'Happy Easter,'" Moss said. The display caught the attention of a 12-year-old boy, who was excited about the items he saw on the menu. "I liked the chicken nuggets," he said. "I like them plain. I like them a lot."
