← Previous / Next → ELDER SCROLLS A DEITY'S WILL. Dragons, giant robots, and even mythical creatures have existed since the ancient times. Some of them were created in the beginning of time, some were lost by the world in its infancy. Some remained to slumber in the underground caverns, waiting to come to life again. And some, which remained in the present time, have been created by God himself, driven into an infernal dimension. We should worship and understand the Divine Power that exists in the Universe. We should not turn our backs on God, the sole All-Powerful One in existence. Welcome to the time of the Gods, when one deity rules over all others. FATHER OF ALL DRAGON GODS. Lord of Dragons, the all-powerful Sovereign of the All-Dragon World, the universal champion. Dragon God, CHAMPION OF ALL DIVINITY. The supreme Dragon God, a prophet who represents gods in our time. Dragon God, FURY OF THE GODS. The great guardian deity, the great Dragon God, the God of Chaos. Dragon God, AMBITIOUS MOTHER OF ALL GODS. The great deity, the majestic Dragon God, the supreme Goddess, the Queen of All Gods. Dragon God, TRUSTEES OF ALL GODS. The powerful, the mighty, the powerful Dragon God, the God of All Thrones. Dragon God, BRIDE OF ALL GODS. The great sister, the great Dragon God, the Keeper of the Divine Laws. Dragon God, INVOLVED IN ALL DIVINITY. The divine and the powerful, the majestic Dragon God, the King of gods in our time. Dragon God, DEDICATED TO THE DEITY. The great and triumphant, the ultimate Dragon God, the great Deity, the slayer of dragons. Dragon bff6bb2d33

With September's end in sight, the most recent chapter in Marvel's Cinematic Universe has gotten out of hand. And now it's time for the conclusion—not just the end of the Avengers: Infinity War movie, but the end of the franchise as we know it. The MCU can't possibly keep going forever. The impending doom is self-evident. I've said it before, but it bears repeating: This is all going to collapse in on itself at some point. Marvel Studios' current plan for the future is to continue the MCU through Phase Four, with a focus on Thor: Love and Thunder, Captain Marvel, and Ant-Man and the Wasp. If the MCU has ever been a coherent whole, it's been in the fourth and fifth phases, and it's unclear whether the Phase Four plans will hold. We could just have this crash-and-burn finale and declare the MCU over; we could roll the credits to Phase Four, while Marvel keeps cranking out movies. But I think we're in danger of falling victim to complacency when it comes to Phase Four, as many fans assume it's somehow going to be the end of everything Marvel has done, and end up preparing for the end of the MCU in their thinking and planning all the time. They're trying to save the world but forgetting to put in the effort required to save themselves. Although it's certainly possible for Marvel to keep going, one can't help but be skeptical.

Why It's Not the End While it's certainly possible for Marvel to keep going, one can't help but be skeptical. And maybe that's what the first Spider-Man movie said: The Risks Having the Phase Four plan be so all-encompassing is problematic because it gives those who control the canon a ton of power; it risks turning the MCU into an empire instead of a galaxy of stories. When the first Thor movie appeared, it was a totally alien concept to many of us. Since then, Joss Whedon's run with The Avengers and his Doctor Horrible movie contributed to the widespread understanding that comic book movies were pretty much for kids. And boy, did that change after the first Thor: The Dark World. Now, we have to take into account the comic
