", "Unsummon Effect on Void Manipulator" Effect: If the Void Soul is used on a void manipulator, then it un-summons it, if it's not already un-summoned. This will also apply to functions called by a void soul(s). But from what it says it can't un-summon a void soul obtained by a void soul stone, because all void souls enter as a aura, which means a void soul stone won't summon it. the position only the names of two of the letters, Oud and King, are typed on a sheet of paper. The juxtaposition of the John Wilkes Booth and John Wilkes Booth Ouders stands in contrast to this; instead of Booth claiming to be the youngest, he claims the title of "Ordux," and the supposedly Ouder Booth claims to be his humble origin. The letter from "Ordux" ends with "I am not, nor ever have been, a member of the Communist party... but our purpose was to demonstrate the difference between the Communist and conservative points of view" (Dobson 23). As in the Booth letter, the Ouder Booth claims to be gay, claiming that "they" employ the "effeminate" stand-ins "...Dennis" and "'Toom,' a good solid working girl of eighteen" to represent their sex (Dobson 23). He further claims that it is this "women's paper" which is responsible for the spread of "red news," circulating it with the "revolutionary point of view of John Wilkes Booth" rather than a "complacent outlook" like the Mayflower and The Herald. Finally, he expresses his gratitude for employment in the "wide world's greatest and gayest toilet of four million people." Note that the Booth and Ouder Booth letters mirror each other in many ways. The letter from "Ordux" reiterates the homoerotic subtext between Booth and Ouder Booth, and even hints that Ouder Booth is homosexual. The letter ends by stating that the Queen's Theatre, where Booth ultimately killed President Lincoln, was part of a plot to poison the President with tartar emetic. Again, much of this letter is the same as that which appeared in the Brennan letter. In addition, while the Booth letter ends almost immediately, the Ouder Booth letter ends twice, with the exclamation of "God Bless You" and "God Bless Thee, Damn You," respectively
