It can be used as a professional and user friendly tool providing an easy way to make your tabla sound more musical and rich in color. Cadmium-, chromium-, and copper-binding proteins of human serum. The Se- and acid-labile, metal-binding characteristics of human serum proteins have been investigated using 2,4,6-trinitrobenzenesulphonate and 37 metals and the protein-metal ratios of different serum and tissue samples have been examined. A total of 185 human sera and 7 bovine sera were studied and it was found that the only essential metals detectable were Cu^{2+} , Fe^{2+} , Zn^{2+} , and, in some samples, Ni^{2+} . Of these, only Cu^{2+} and Fe^{2+} are bound at a significant level in serum. Binding of Cd^{2+} was found in only 3 of 185 human sera while binding of Cr^{3+} was detected in 9 of 20 bovine sera. More than 50% of all serum samples contained no measurable levels of Co^{2+} or Mn^{2+} . It is concluded that both Cu^{2+} and Fe^{2+} binding to serum proteins, especially albumin, may be involved in the maintenance of the normal levels of these essential metals in the serum and that both Cd^{2+} and Cr^{3+} may be of significance only at concentrations above a critical level. The significance of this study is that it shows that Cd^{2+} , Cr^{3+} , Co^{2+} , and Mn^{2+} are definitely not essential metals in humans, a conclusion in contrast to the situation with these metals in animals. The complete nucleotide sequence of M-type mRNA encoding a calmodulin-binding peptide from rat liver. We have isolated and characterized a cDNA clone corresponding to M-type mRNA for calmodulin binding peptide (CBP) in rat liver. The nucleotide sequence of this cDNA was determined and the amino acid sequence of the preproCBP was deduced from the nucleotide sequence. The preproCBP consisted of 76 amino acids and had a predicted molecular mass of 8.6 kDa. A nonapeptide (FKDLMAIADFE) for binding to calmodulin was located just before the signal peptide sequence (residues 1-25) of the preproCBP. The present invention pertains generally to magnetic read/write 648931e174
