As a big retro-fan, Retro Rocket Robot was created by 3 guys. They are all coming from different areas and backgrounds, but everyone love the retro games. One day they tried to make a game from retro without the PC, using a java application. Retro Rocket Robot was created and developed by Alon Gibula, Eran Adiv, and myself, David Behr. No one else knew that Retro Rocket Robot was in development until the moment it was released. Replayability Rating:8/10

The Great Bazooka of Banagher has told his new apprentice Ed the origins of the Voodoo font, but Ed doesn't believe him. When the Voodoo font appears on Ed's blade, he feels a great urge to use it. He's kept one hand on the sword of Chaos for long enough...a little more practice and he's sure he'll be able to use it to save Banagher from Voodoo domination.

Ed doesn't know what to do. The reason the Font of Power is appearing is because someone has been performing rituals in his secret cave. Despite the warnings of his sensei, he's bent on finding out where the rituals are coming from.

Banagher is safe for now, but there's still danger lurking in his forests. If Ed can stop the rituals, there may be hope for his village. If he doesn't, their worst nightmares will become reality.

The souls of characters that played a central role in the game, living or otherwise, may appear in the game. These characters are also referred to as Souls. They can be obtained through game play events such as rituals, defeating bosses, or finishing events. Souls are randomly generated while gameplay progresses.

All Souls will bring a different significance to the game. Some will be mildly frightening; others will be positively amusing.

The game is set in the same trip "Rockin' Roadtrip" is the thirteenth episode of the 22nd season of the American animated television series South Park. The 284th overall episode of the series, it premiered on Comedy Central in the United States on November 11, 2008. The episode is the second of two titled "Road Trip", the other being "I'm OK You're OK", and was co-written by series co-creators Trey Parker and Matt Stone with Justin Crow. In the episode, Cartman attributes the roto-root-root to a love for "that old-timey sound" of the fifties, and goes on a random country-wide bus tour to recover. Meanwhile, Randy pays the consequences for planting his crotch on a poster of a former classmate. Parker and Stone originally wanted to call the episode "Roto-Root-Root for Something Good", but the title was rejected by Comedy Central. The plot of the episode was loosely based on a scheme conceived by Parker and Stone when they were in high school. The base ideas of the episodes were updated to the present day. Parker and Stone had originally created the idea for the "Road Trip" episodes after they decided to "make fun of USA for using bumpers for commercials", even though the season had just finished its production. Parker and Stone were aware of "Rockin' Roadtrip" being a popular song. When the song received substantial airplay, Comedy Central decided to use it. Trey Parker, who voiced Stan, commented the song had "twang, swing, and Americana" to it, which impacted the plot of the episode. It was rated TV-MA in the United States by the Motion Picture Association of America for "crude and sexual content". The episode received generally mixed to negative reception from critics. Comedy Central ultimately received critical acclaim for their use of the song, with reviewers noting this was the first time a song played during an episode of the series during its entire run. Critics generally agreed the episode was satirical. It was nominated for the Primetime Emmy Award for Outstanding Animated Program. Plot Walter, Albert, Stan, Kyle, Mr. Slave, Cartman, and Kenny embark on a road trip. The group stops to eat at a truck stop, but when Cartman decides to get a newspaper from the truck stop Restroom & Gas Station, his crotch is put on display on the restroom door. Randy finds this to be offensive. As a result, Cartman
