And, Google understands. It's a good place to start. The first line is a string, the literal name of the string. 2. The next line is the definition of a variable, meaning that you're declaring an actual variable (the "a" is the name). 3. The next line is initializing the variable - you're declaring how much of the string is going to be stored in the variable and the constant "5" is the initial value. 4. The next line is the length of the string. 5. The next line is printing the value of the variable. This pattern of declarations and manipulations is how a computer operates. It doesn't really matter what programming language you're using - this is what gets executed by the computer. As you build your computer programs, you'll need to keep repeating these steps. In order to print the value of a variable, you must declare it, initialize it, and manipulate it. 6. The next line declares a variable called "s". 7. The next line makes s an actual string, initializes it with the string "aa", and then adds 5 to it. 8. The next line prints the value of s. String operations such as adding and subtracting are done by joining the strings together, changing the length of the strings, and manipulating them individually. 9. The next two lines combine two strings together - "s" and "a" are all that are needed to print "sasa". 10. The next line gets the length of the string "sasa". 11. The next line gets the length of the string "aaa". 12. The next line adds 1 to "aaa". 13. The next line adds 1 to "sasa". 14. The next line removes 1 from "sasa". 15. The next two lines remove 1 from "sasa". 16. The next line gets the length of the string "asa". 17. The next line gets the length of the string "aaaa". 18. The next line adds 2 to "aaaa". 19. The next line subtracts 2 from "sasa". 20. The next line subtracts 2 from "asa". 21. The next line gets the length of the string "aaa". 22. The next line adds

The kinetic characteristics of the transition, driven by electrical polarization, from steady-state to transient 86Rb uptake in high-rate stimulated guinea pig hearts were compared to those of the well-known Na⁺-K⁺ pump in the same hearts. The transient 86Rb uptake was monitored at the maximum uptakes induced by veratridine, hypertonic K⁺ solutions, and at the time of the peak 86Rb uptake induced by high-rate stimulation. The rate of 90% 86Rb uptake was sustained for 30 s, and the initial rate of uptake was slower than that of Na⁺-K⁺ pump. The decrease of 90% 86Rb uptake in the absence of extracellular Na⁺ suggests that the concurrent antiport of protons and 86Rb is an important component of the 86Rb uptake. In addition, the absolute, as well as relative, rates of 86Rb uptake induced by 0.45-0.75 M K⁺ stimulation and by the veratridine-induced rise in [Na⁺]_i were not significantly different. Consequently, the transient 86Rb uptake induced by 0.5 to 0.75 M K⁺ stimulation and veratridine in the same heart was suggested to be the result of the cooperative action of the Na⁺-K⁺ pump and of the Na⁺-Rb antiporter. The use of sulfate as a blocker of Na⁺-K⁺ pumps, as well as the effect of the 86Rb⁺ on 86Rb uptake in the presence of an identical number of 86Rb⁺ accumulated at steady state, indicated that the rate of steady-state 86Rb uptake was dependent on the rate of the Na⁺-Rb antiport. What do you think of GOP Rep. Lee Zeldin, who is facing strong challenger Darryl Hunt? It's not the political ads (they say pretty much the same thing about Mr. Zeldin) but the questions more interesting to me. The one in the second paragraph is a no-brainer, with the obvious follow up to that I know Mr. Zeldin has been having sex (
