The little girl, 3-year-old Viviana Villafane, was attacked by a dog at about 11:45 p.m. on Sept. 8, 2016, according to a San Mateo County Sheriff's Department news release. The family found Villafane with puncture wounds on her neck but did not realize she was injured because she had stopped crying, the release said. Villafane was rushed to the hospital, where she was pronounced dead an hour later. An autopsy showed she died of multiple dog bites. She is the third reported dog attack victim in Palo Alto since last year. The Almanac reported in June that a 22-year-old man was attacked by a dog and suffered a fracture of his left eye. In September 2016, a teenager was bitten on her shoulder by a dog in the downtown area, according to the report. Victims of dog attacks can usually identify the dog that attacked them, the Sheriff's Office said in a news release. If people are bitten by a dog and don't know the owner, they should contact the Sheriff's Office. "We are asking the public to be vigilant about their pets," Lt. Eric Robinson said in the release. "If you don't own a dog, it is probably not a good idea to let it off its leash. Most owners are honest when they report a situation, but a few aren't. It's important

The new revelation comes on the heels of the Facebook-Cambridge Analytica scandal, as investigators look into whether the data of up to 87 million Facebook users may have been exposed in the scandal. It also comes at a time when users have grown increasingly wary of the platform. The news of Facebook's political ad practices revealed on Wednesday will likely only increase the unease. Bloomberg News published an investigation about the issue on Tuesday, and it showed that Facebook continues to allow candidates and political groups to buy ads on the platform despite allegedly promising to clean up its politics practices. "We told Congress in 2018 that we could take down Russian-backed ads before they impacted US elections. Facebook has an obligation to do the same for
