Argentina has settled its US$15bn (£10.4bn) dispute with the City of London over unpaid bonds and restructured the debt. The Argentine government said the settlement was reached at a two-day meeting of creditors in London, where it faces demands totalling US$195bn. The restructured debt will have a 75-year expiry date, which could provide a window of opportunity for Argentina to return to markets after the recession that followed its 2001 default. This will be the second debt workout, and the first deal to be approved in New York rather than London. The settlement deal had been a closely guarded secret until it was revealed as news of the deal was being announced on the official website of the International Monetary Fund (IMF), which organised the negotiations.

Follow-up of viral hepatitis E in India: A study of 3,934 confirmed and unsubstantiated cases of acute viral hepatitis. We retrospectively analyzed 3,934 cases of acute viral hepatitis, ranging in age from 2 to 69 years, that had been confirmed by the Department of Virology, Christian Medical College Hospital, Vellore, India, during 1984-2000. The cases were classified as primary (n=3,150) or secondary (n=684) hepatitis E. We found that 1,341 patients (34.1%) were positive for hepatitis E-related RNA-positive serum samples, of which 708 (55.1%) were primary and 533 (44.9%) secondary hepatitis E. Mitotic recombination can break DNA at a variety of sites in the genome. The recombination machinery consists of the proteins RAD51, DMC1, DMC2 and RAD54; as well as the bridging factor BRCA2 and accessory proteins that interact with them. The RAD51 paralogs, RAD51B/D, are proposed to have specialized roles in meiosis where they are involved in homology-mediated processes. We have found that the function of RAD51B/D in mitotic recombination is highly regulated by phosphorylation. We hypothesize that the RAD51B/D paralogs may be involved in a positive or negative feedback loop regulating homologous recombination and that the phosphorylation-dependent regulation of recombination repair fidelity and/or specificity may provide a key functional difference between the RAD51B/D paralogs. The specific aims of this project are (1) to define the mechanisms
